Hicks Morley Introduces Case Law Blog

Date: October 19, 2012

Hicks Morley is pleased to announce the launch of Case In Point, a blog designed to provide human resources professionals with timely information about interesting case law developments in a range of employment-related areas. In this FTR Now, we highlight the features of this new service.

BACKGROUND

In 2010, Hicks Morley launched Human Resources Legislative Update, a blog focused on providing clients with updates on the progress of Ontario and federal legislation, proposed legislation and legislative reform and regulatory initiatives impacting human resources in a wide range of areas.

Our new Case In Point service builds on this initiative.

ABOUT THE CASE IN POINT BLOG

Hicks Morley's Case In Point tracks a broad range of provincial and federal decisions, including those of administrative tribunals, such as the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario and individual labour arbitrators, as well as decisions of interest from all levels of court in jurisdictions across Canada. Topics include:

- Administrative Law
- Constitutional Law
- Education Law
- Employment Law
- Health and Safety
- Human Rights
- Information and Privacy
- Labour Relations
- Minimum Standards
- Pension and Benefits
